A Primer on Genetics, Genomics and Plant Breeding

Wilfred Vermerris

Genetics Institute and Agronomy department, University of Florida, Gainesville, FL, USA, wev@ufl.edu

2.1 Introduction

The focus of this book, as the title indicates, is on the genetic improvement of bioenergy crops. Chapter 4 deals with the biochemistry and genetics of cell wall biosynthesis, and Chapters 7–15 focus on individual crops, with an emphasis on the breeding strategies that can be employed to improve these crops for bioenergy production. These chapters are written with the assumption the reader has basic knowledge of plant genetics and plant breeding. In order to make this book accessible to a broad audience, this primer is intended to provide basic background information on plant molecular genetics and plant breeding. The chapter is written for an audience with basic knowledge of biology and chemistry. Textbooks that offer a more detailed and extensive treatise on the various topics are referenced throughout the text. It should be possible to read the main Sections (2.2, 2.3, etc.) independently from each other.

These chapters are written with the assumption the reader has basic knowledge of plant genetics and plant breeding. In order to make this book accessible to a broad account of New Labour rule in Wales in the late 1990s.

PRESENTATION, PRESENTATION, PRESENTATION ...

The presentational approach to blame avoidance was briefly sketched out in the first chapter. It denotes attempts to affect the harm perception or agency dimensions of blame by spin, timing, stage management, and various forms of persuasion. The great philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche once wrote (albeit in unpublished notes) that “there are no facts, only interpretations.”¹ That statement is an expression of what is known as perspectivism and is itself (of course) philosophically contestable. But presentational strategies for warding off blame certainly operate on an assumption that is close to Nietzsche’s famous dictum, and the spin doctor’s art is to concentrate on the interpretation or framing of what might otherwise be embarrassing “facts.”

The practice of “impression management” (Schlenker 1980) is hardly a new discovery, and framing analysis has long been a central theme of psychology and social science (see, for instance, Goffman 1986; Tversky and Kahneman 1981). But, as the cynical Private Eye quote in the first epigraph perhaps reflects, presentational strategies for avoiding blame attract a lot of attention in what is often portrayed as an age of spinocracy. As we noted in chapter 1, much has been written in recent years about spin and presentation as a way of avoiding blame and claiming credit.² Numerous commentators (as well as novelists, playwrights, and satirists) have been fascinated by the apparent rise of a so-called media class, comprising powerful public relations professionals or czars who service delivery, it creates a conveniently moving target to avoid blame directed at previous structures and incumbents.

So when the logic of blame avoidance dominates organizational design, it may lead in directions very different from those suggested by other design principles. In particular, when deflecting or diffusing blame is of the essence, the emphasis typically goes on designing organizations to achieve disconnection among different units and disconnection from past

Abstract
'An urgent call from physicist Sir Claud Amory sends famed detective Hercule Poirot rushing from London to a sprawling country estate. Sir Claud fears a member of his own household wants to steal a secret formula destined for the Ministry of Defense. But Poirot arrives too late. The formula is missing. Worse, Sir Claud has been...

Audiobook Experience

5 clicks for initial setup

The screenshot displays the EBSCO Audiobook Collection interface. The top navigation bar includes links for 'New Search', 'Dictionary', and 'Audiobooks'. The main search area shows 'Searching: Audiobook Collection' and 'Choose Databases'. The left sidebar contains filters for '152 Results for...', 'Boolean/Phrase: EC BIO*', 'Length (in hours): 3-6', 'Refine your results', 'Full Text', 'Publication Date' (2008 to 2011), 'Source Types' (All Results, Audiobooks), and 'Subject'. The main content area lists audiobooks, with the first two visible being '21. The Priceless Experience of Losing It All : a True Story' and '22. Bag Lady Papers : The Priceless Experience of Losing It All : a True Story'. A 'Download Manager Setup' dialog box is overlaid on the interface, titled 'Installation Complete'. The dialog box contains the text 'Thank you, and please visit EBSCOhost to begin downloading Audiobooks.' and a 'Close' button. Below the dialog box, there is a 'Checkout Period (in days): 42' dropdown menu, a 'Checkout & Download' button, and a 'Cancel' button. The bottom of the interface shows the 'Database: Audiobook Collection', 'Add to folder', 'Relevancy: ', 'Sample', and 'Download' buttons.

Subject Sets

EBSCO offers an extensive list of Subject Sets, which are pre-packaged collections of frontlist titles created by EBSCO's Collection Development team. The Sets allow for quick and easy purchases in particular high-interest subject areas. There is no title overlap across Sets, and no title overlap from year to year, so you never need to worry about duplication.

Note: Pricing reflects a one book, one user purchase model. Multi or unlimited user purchase models may be available for certain titles—please contact your sales representative for more information.
